Aspen knows a thing or two about self-care—and this season, the bar is set even higher. With celebrity esthetician Georgia Louise taking up a limited-time residency at the Little Nell Spa, locals have a new excuse to slow down, indulge and emerge feeling restored from the inside out. by RACHEL FEINBLATT

Face Time

This season, Aspen's beauty landscape receives a luminous upgrade with the arrival of Georgia Louise Beauty's Longevity Atelier at The Little Nell. Equal parts educator, artist and skin strategist, the celebrity esthetician brings her globally sought-after expertise to the mountains, temporarily opening her typically closed waitlist for a winter residency devoted to facial architecture, fascia and lymphatic work, and the art of long-term skin health. Designed to counter high-altitude stress and après-ski dryness alike, her treatments promise a glow that lasts well beyond the slopes. Consider her A-list clientele—Jennifer Aniston, Anne Hathaway, Emily Blunt, among others—proof that this is beauty longevity at its most refined.

Proof that great skin is both an inside job and the result of expert hands, guests have the rare opportunity to book appointments directly with Georgia herself, whose 26-year career has shaped some of the world's most recognizable complexions. A facialist who understands your skin better than you, her approach seamlessly blends skin health and beauty longevity into every treatment, restoring balance and creating a youthful, sculpted appearance that endures long after the final ski run. For those eager to extend the experience, Georgia Louise's state-of-the-art product collection allows guests to take the glow home—quite literally.

The partnership feels entirely organic, rooted in a shared commitment to excellence from both Georgia Louise and The Little Nell. With this elevated expansion of the Little Nell Spa, the renowned facialist brings her high-altitude expertise—and a quietly devoted following—to Aspen. Extending her reach beyond her Upper East Side atelier, the collaboration proves that exceptional skin knows no elevation when Georgia Louise is involved. *675 E.
